Are you interested in hearing about critical and social justice perspectives on your first year classes? Would you like to get to know more about the scholarship of King Hall professors? The Critical Perspectives on First-Year Classes speaker series is for you!

Tuesday, August 28, 2018
Noon - 1:00P.M. | King Hall, Rm 1303 | Lunch Provided
Professor Thomas Joo
Contract Law

Wednesday, August 29, 2018
Noon - 1:00P.M. | King Hall, Rm 1303 | Lunch Provided
Professor Gabriel "Jack" Chin
Criminal Law

Thursday, August 31, 2018
Noon - 1:00P.M. | King Hall, Rm 1303 | Lunch Provided
Professor Brian Soucek
Civil Procedure; What the State Owes You Before Imposing Its Violence upon You

The purpose of the “Critical Perspectives” talks, sponsored by the Aoki Center, is twofold. First, we seek to expose first-year students to critical perspectives that often do not make it onto the syllabus of regular first-year classes. Given the high level of interest among King Hall students in social justice, this exposure will connect many students to the concerns and perspectives that brought them to law school in the first place.

The second goal of the series is to connect King Hall students more closely with their faculty. King Hall has an extraordinarily accomplished faculty with expertise in areas of race, immigration, gender, and sexuality. Through these lunch talks, interested students can learn more about the cutting edge of legal scholarship in these fields and develop a better understanding of faculty research projects.