UNIVERSITY AND LOCATION

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

The University of California (UC) is one of the finest public institutions of higher education in the United States, with many professional schools including five law schools located at its campuses in Berkeley, Davis, Irvine, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The UC Davis University Library contains more than three million volumes, and the Mabie Law Library houses more than 375,000 print volumes and volume equivalents, and provides access to a wealth of licensed online resources as well as electronic access to journals and databases via the California Digital Library.

The UC Davis School of Law is a top-tier U.S. law school. Our students consistently perform well on the California bar examination. All courses offered through the International Law Programs are MCLE-approved by the California and New York Bar Associations. The International Law Section of the State Bar of California is a co-sponsor of these programs.

ABOUT THE CITY OF DAVIS

The UC Davis campus is located in the city of Davis. Davis has a population of 66,205 and is a popular place for professionals and their families because it is safe, comfortable and has a variety of recreational opportunities. Known as an ecologically aware and socially innovative town, Davis has more than 160 kilometers of bicycle paths and boasts the highest percentage of bicycle commuters in the United States. It also has 210 hectares of parks, greenbelts and open spaces.

Davis is located in the Central Valley about 20 kilometers from Sacramento, the state capital, where many of the trade and business policies for California are determined. Davis is within two hours of the San Francisco Bay Area and the world famous Napa Valley. Only two hours from Lake Tahoe, Davis is also within close proximity to some of California's most beautiful and historic areas such as the Sierra Nevada Gold Country, Yosemite Valley and Monterey.

ADVANCED LAW DEGREE

MASTER OF LAWS (LL.M.)

A one- or two-year, in-residence program

August – May each year

The UC Davis School of Law LL.M. offers a superior educational experience for foreign lawyers, judges, prosecutors and other legal professionals. Classes are taught by outstanding faculty scholars, and students are integrated into J.D. classes. The program is designed around individual student needs, and LL.M. students can pursue a general course of study or a specialization from an area within the UC Davis School of Law curriculum such as Business Law, private and public International Law, Criminal Law and Procedure, Intellectual Property, Human Rights and Social Justice Law, Public Interest Law, Environmental and Natural Resources Law, Health Law and Bioethics and many others. Students may also take a pre-Bar study program. UC Davis offers one- and two-year options.

LL.M. candidates must complete a minimum of 20 semester units. Foreign LL.M. candidates take two courses especially designed for foreign law graduates that provide a foundation for understanding the U.S. legal system. Participants earn the remainder of their required course credit by taking regular courses at the UC Davis School of Law with American J.D. students.

The law school also admits foreign LL.M. candidates on a thesis rather than a course basis. The thesis track requires a substantial proposed research project falling within the area of expertise of a law faculty member who is willing to supervise the student's research and who strongly recommends graduate study for the applicant. The law school accepts thesis-track students only if their proposed thesis is likely to make a significant scholarly contribution.

LL.M. candidates must complete their degree during two consecutive semesters of residential study for the one-year program; please inquire about our two-year LL.M. option. LL.M. candidates are encouraged to enroll in Orientation in U.S.A. Law, offered the month before the Master of Laws (LL.M.) program begins.

To ensure a top quality experience for its students, the Master of Laws (LL.M.) program is selective. Applicants must have a minimum TOEFL iBT score of 88 (or 230 computer-based or 570 paper-based score). An IELTS score of 6.5 is also acceptable.

Graduates of this master's degree program have gone on to sit for the bar examinations in New York and California in order to become U.S. attorneys.

TWO-YEAR ADVANCED LL.M.

For some students, a longer period of study is vital to meeting educational and career goals. For more information about our two-year Advanced LL.M. Program, please contact LL.M. Admissions Director Concha Romero at cromero@ucdavis.edu or +1 (530) 752-6081.

SPRING START LL.M. OPTION

For some students, starting the LL.M. program in spring semester is vital to meeting educational and career goals. For more information about our Spring Start LL.M. option, please contact LL.M. Admissions Director Concha Romero at cromero@ucdavis.edu or +1 (530) 752-6081.
