Welcome to UC Davis School of Law, where we offer the highest quality of legal education to outstanding students from all backgrounds.

Consistently highly ranked among the nation’s top law schools, UC Davis Law views excellence as the standard. Yet the culture is friendly and inclusive.

Our world class “majority-minority” faculty consists of scholars whose expertise ranges from constitutional and criminal law fundamentals to the latest takes on intellectual property and big data. And as we transitioned to more online instruction due to the pandemic, our faculty acquired impressive technical skills as well.

Although 2020 brought unprecedented challenges, we never lost sight of the fundamental principles that guide Martin Luther King Jr. Hall. Our ongoing 2020-21 Racial Justice Speaker Series addresses some of the most important issues facing our nation, and legal system, today.

We also are committed to positioning our students as favorably as possible in the legal job market. Our staff attorney-counselors always are ready to advise, and our devoted alumni are always willing to lend a hand.

If you are admitted and come to UC Davis Law, you will join a community ready to help you succeed.

The artful lawyer

The King Hall community: A shared vision

With more than 50 student groups and six student-run law journals, student life reflects the remarkable diversity of UC Davis Law. The pursuit of social justice and public service remains as avid as it was 50 years ago, when students lobbied successfully to name the then-new law school building after Martin Luther King Jr. UC Davis produces lawyers of conscience, regardless of their practice areas.
UC DAVIS LAW’S CLASS OF 2023:

Our first-year class is academically accomplished and the most diverse ever:

- 34% will receive need-based aid
- 163 median LSAT score
- 3.71 median GPA
- 84 undergraduate schools represented
- 21% first-generation college students
- 19% identify as LGBTQ
- 71% Women
- 56% Students of Color

UC Davis School of Law is proud of its groundbreaking “majority-minority” faculty, ranked No. 23 in the nation in scholarly impact. The law school's modest size and community feel allow for greater interaction among students and faculty than at other top-tier law schools.
A productive partnership

Kendra Clark ’19 spent two years as a research assistant to Professor Irene Joe, a former New Orleans public defender whose scholarship incorporates criminal procedure and legal ethics. “Kendra is extremely dedicated to life as a public defender and the work public defenders do with indigent defendants,” Joe said. “Having her come on to provide a fresh perspective was crucial.”

Joe also assisted Clark, by providing examples of how to craft scholarly articles. While working with Joe, Clark drafted an article that later would be published by the UC Davis Law Review and win the school’s prestigious Hopkins award. After graduation, Clark began working for the Alameda County Public Defender.
A degree from UC Davis School of Law opens doors to the United States’ premier law firms. We have alumni in the most desirable markets nationwide, with special concentrations in nearby — and red-hot — San Francisco and Silicon Valley. Southern California also is a hub.
Minutes from campus is Sacramento, California’s capital and one of the state’s most diverse and fastest-growing cities. An established Davis-Capitol pipeline helps graduates secure government and law-firm jobs.
Realize your ambitions

UC Davis Law offers one of the finest, and most well-rounded, legal educations available. Students can gain hands-on experience through externships, internships and clerkships, skills classes, moot court and law reviews, and by helping represent underserved populations via public service fellowships and our law clinics. Our Career Services office helps create further connections by bringing employers to campus to meet students.

“From Law Review to entertainment law

“My time on the UC Davis Law Review was very helpful, just in the attention to detail. Especially as a transactional lawyer – every word you use matters.”

-Cheryl Wei, class of 2011, at Davis Wright Tremaine LLP in Los Angeles, where she represents studios, production companies and television networks.
Working for you

Our Career Services office brings more than 200 employers a year to campus for face-to-face meetings and interviews with students. Visitors include representatives from the nation’s largest law firms, small and midsize firms, and the government and public interest sectors.

In 2020-21, Career Services is working with these employers and others to recruit UC Davis Law students through a virtual job-interview program and virtual job fairs. These online programs have made it easier for employers who are geographically distant from Davis to recruit students.

“At UC Davis School of Law, I got to know the professors really well. When I expressed an interest in entertainment, I was able to carve out that area for myself by taking the types of courses that would lead me on this track: contracts, intellectual property, copyright. ... There was such a broad array of opportunities. I was able to explore interests if I had them, and also parlay the classes I took into getting a job.”

Immigration Law Clinic

UC Davis School of Law’s Immigration Law Clinic often makes national headlines for its tireless work on behalf of detained migrant children and families and other immigrants in need. The clinic received more than $1.3 million through donations and grants in 2019, allowing it to add more staff attorneys to work with students.

Evan Reid
CLASS OF 2020

Later this fall, Georgia native and 2020 MLK Service Award recipient Reid will return to the South to work on death-penalty cases as a fellow with the Equal Justice Initiative, the organization headed by professor and lawyer Bryan Stevenson (“Just Mercy”).
Create the future

UC Davis Law alumni help shape the future, whether they are protecting copyrights of Silicon Valley tech entrepreneurs or safeguarding our waterways as environmental gatekeepers.

“I wanted to attend law school to better understand governance systems and the legal constraints in natural resource management.”

Before law school, Kalua worked at Ocean Conservancy, a Washington, D.C.-based nonprofit. Drawn to UC Davis Law’s outstanding environmental law program and opportunities to work in the state capital, Kalua externed with the Governor’s Office and State Water Resources Control Board. She is now a policy analyst for the California Coastkeeper Alliance.
Karen Johnson-McKewan
CLASS OF 1985

A partner at Orrick in San Francisco, Johnson-McKewan has represented Netflix and Oracle in high-profile cases. In 2019, she was named to The Hollywood Reporter’s “Power Lawyers” list for the second consecutive year. Dedicated to pro bono work, Johnson-McKewan also scored a key win for Planned Parenthood of Indiana and Kentucky in 2018.

Alica Del Valle
CLASS OF 2006

“There is no one singular definition of ‘lawyer’ today. If you have the skill set and confidence in your abilities, you can define ‘lawyer’ in a way that works for you.”

Del Valle at Airbnb in San Francisco, where she is global legal head of IP, marketing, communications, production & content.
At UC Davis Law, we are committed to helping provide equal access to a legal education. The King Hall Outreach Program helps undergraduates from underrepresented communities prepare for the law school admissions process; Pathway to Law School targets law school hopefuls in community college; First Generation Advocates pairs first-generation UC Davis Law students with faculty mentors.
Third-year UC Davis Law student Benny Lima, a first-generation college graduate, plans to work with emerging companies and venture capital.

FINANCIAL AID

At King Hall, we believe finances should not be a barrier to engaging in our high-quality public legal education.

We offer a wide variety of funding options, and our extraordinarily generous merit- and need-based gift aid ensures that UC Davis School of Law remains financially accessible.

In 2020, U.S. News & World Report ranked UC Davis School of Law #4 among public law schools awarding the most financial aid.

Financial assistance is available for students including: merit-based scholarships, need-based grants, early decision select scholars and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. public interest scholarships. The law school also offers financial aid for international students, veterans and undocumented students.
