Message from the Dean

Welcome to UC Davis School of Law, where we offer the highest quality of legal education to outstanding students from all backgrounds. Our unwavering commitment to diversity, equity and inclusion is known worldwide.

Consistently highly ranked among the nation's top law schools, UC Davis Law views excellence as the standard. Yet the culture is friendly and inclusive. Our world-class "majority-minority" faculty consists of scholars whose expertise ranges from constitutional and business law to the latest takes on intellectual property and big data.

In the classroom and on the world stage, our faculty lend crucial, astute perspective to the most urgent issues of the day. They are the experts the media calls to help clear the cloud of misinformation surrounding free speech, immigration and civil rights, gun rights or the abortion debate.

Social justice principles guide Martin Luther King Jr. Hall. Through our ongoing Racial Justice Speaker Series, leading criminal law, civil rights and race scholars and top attorneys address the systemic racism that infects U.S. society.

We are committed to positioning our students as favorably as possible in the legal job market. Our Career Services staff attorney-counselors are ready to advise, and our devoted alumni willing to lend a hand.

If you are admitted and come to UC Davis Law, you will join a community ready to ensure you succeed. And you will never regret the decision.

The artful lawyer

Reza Harris was the graduate speaker at 2019's commencement, and the artist behind a mural tribute to Martin Luther King Jr. painted on behalf of the Black Law Students Association. He started his law career at Silicon Valley's Cooley LLP.

The King Hall community: A shared vision

With more than 50 student groups and six student-run law journals, student life reflects the remarkable diversity of UC Davis Law. The pursuit of social justice and public service remains as avid as it was 53 years ago, when students lobbied successfully to name the then-new law school building after Martin Luther King Jr. UC Davis graduates lawyers of conscience, regardless of their practice areas.

AN INCLUSIVE, ACCESSIBLE FACULTY

UC Davis School of Law is proud of its groundbreaking “majority-minority” faculty, ranked No. 22 in the nation in scholarly impact. The law school’s modest size and community feel allow for greater interaction among students and faculty than at other top-tier law schools.

A productive partnership

Kendra Clark '19 spent two years as a research assistant to Professor Irene Joe, a former New Orleans public defender whose scholarship incorporates criminal procedure and legal ethics. “Kendra is extremely dedicated to life as a public defender and the work public defenders do with indigent defendants,” Joe said. “Having her come on to provide a fresh perspective was crucial.”

Joe also assisted Clark, by providing examples of how to craft scholarly articles. While working with Joe, Clark drafted an article that later would be published by the UC Davis Law Review and win the school’s prestigious Hopkins award. Clark is now an Alameda County associate deputy public defender.

Realize your ambitions

UC Davis Law offers one of the finest, and most well-rounded, legal educations available. Students can gain hands-on experience through externships, internships and clerkships, skills classes, moot court and law reviews, and by helping represent underserved populations via public service fellowships and our law clinics. Our Career Services office helps create further connections by bringing employers to campus to meet students.

From Law Review to entertainment law

“My time on the UC Davis Law Review was very helpful, just in the attention to detail. Especially as a transactional lawyer – every word you use matters.”

Cheryl Wei, class of 2011, at Davis Wright Tremaine LLP in Los Angeles, where she represents studios, production companies and television networks

Small and Midsize Firm Fair at King Hall

Working for you

Our Career Services office connects students to more than 200 employers each year. They include representatives from the nation's largest law firms, small and midsize firms and the government and public interest sectors.

In 2022-23, Career Services is working with these employers and others to recruit UC Davis Law students through a virtual job-interview program and virtual job fairs. These online programs have made it easier for employers who are geographically distant from Davis to recruit students.

Alison Lima

CLASS OF 1996

“At UC Davis School of Law, I got to know the professors really well. When I expressed an interest in entertainment, I was able to carve out that area for myself by taking the types of courses that would lead me on this track: contracts, intellectual property, copyright. ... There was such a broad array of opportunities. I was able to explore interests if I had them, and also parlay the classes I took into getting a job.”

Lima at the Hollywood headquarters of Netflix, where she is vice president, business & legal affairs, animation and consumer products

Learning by doing

J.M. Florentino '21 spent the summer of 2019 working at Sacramento's Weintraub Tobin law firm as a Sacramento County Bar Association Diversity Fellow. Florentino worked alongside fellow UC Davis Law student Anders Bostrom '20, who was a summer associate at the firm.

Immigration Law Clinic

UC Davis School of Law's Immigration Law Clinic often makes national headlines for its tireless work on behalf of detained migrant children and families and other immigrants in need. Now four decades old, the UC Davis Law clinic was among the first of its kind.

Create the future

UC Davis Law alumni help shape the future, whether they are protecting copyrights of Silicon Valley tech entrepreneurs or safeguarding our waterways as environmental gatekeepers.

Kaitlyn Kalua

CLASS OF 2016

“I wanted to attend law school to better understand governance systems and the legal constraints in natural resource management.”

Before law school, Kalua worked at Ocean Conservancy, a Washington, D.C.-based nonprofit. Drawn to UC Davis Law’s outstanding environmental law program and opportunities to work in the state capital, Kalua externed with the Governor’s Office and State Water Resources Control Board. She is now water quality program manager for the California Ocean Protection Council.

Alicia Del Valle

CLASS OF 2006

“There is no one singular definition of ‘lawyer’ today. If you have the skill set and confidence in your abilities, you can define ‘lawyer’ in a way that works for you.”

Del Valle at Airbnb in San Francisco, where she is global head of diversity and belonging.

Karen Johnson-McKewan

CLASS OF 1985

A partner at Orrick in San Francisco, Johnson-McKewan has represented Netflix and Oracle in high-profile cases. In 2019, she was named to The Hollywood Reporter's “Power Lawyers” list for the second consecutive year. Dedicated to pro bono work, Johnson-McKewan also scored a key win for Planned Parenthood of Indiana and Kentucky in 2018.

BREAK BARRIERS

At UC Davis Law, we are committed to helping provide equal access to a legal education. The King Hall Outreach Program helps undergraduates from underrepresented communities prepare for the law school admissions process; the Community College Pathway to Law School initiative targets law school hopefuls in community college; First Generation Advocates pairs first-generation UC Davis Law students with faculty mentors.

Ben Lima '21, a first-generation college graduate, realized his plan of working with emerging companies when he went to work for Cooley LLP in fall 2021.

Joana Peraza
Lizarraga

CLASS OF 2021

“Scholarships are one of the most important gifts you can give to future generations.”

Peraza, recipient of the Martin Luther King Jr. Public Interest and Satre Family scholarships and a daughter of immigrants, is practicing immigration law as a fellow for the California Rural Legal Assistance Foundation.

SUPPORTING YOUR VISION

At King Hall, we believe finances should not be a barrier to a high-quality public legal education. We offer generous financial aid packages.

We offer a wide variety of funding options, and our extraordinarily generous merit- and need-based gift aid ensures that UC Davis School of Law remains financially accessible.

Financial assistance is available for students including: merit-based scholarships, need-based grants, early decision select scholars and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. public interest scholarships. The law school also offers financial aid for international students, veterans and undocumented students.
